DIVERSITY ACTION PLAN

2017 – 2022

(Reviewed January 2022)

Angling Trust

ABOUT US

Formed in 2009 after a merger of several disparate organisations, the Angling Trust is the unified representative body for all angling in England and Wales and the national governing body in England. It is united in a collaborative relationship with Fish Legal, a separate but closely linked membership association taking legal action to protect its members' interests and the water environment.

Principal activities:

- Lobbying/Campaigning: on behalf of members and the angling community to protect and improve fish stocks and the right to fish for them;
- Angling and Environmental Projects: working with the Environment Agency and others to carry out projects to improve angling and the water environment;
- Membership and fundraising: providing membership benefits to a wide range of categories of membership, administering subscriptions and raising funds for the Angling Trust & Fish Legal;
- Promoting and developing angling: increasing the diversity and number of participants in angling, the frequency of participation and the standards of safeguarding and coaching;
- Competitions: providing a wide range of Angling Trust regional and national competitions in England for all angling disciplines and supporting England's national teams to win medals;
- Support Fish Legal: collaborate closely with Fish Legal in accordance with a Service Level Agreement and other governance documents to enable it to take legal action to protect the water environment and the interests of its members.

OUR MISSION

The Angling Trust protects and improves recreational angling and fish stocks, on behalf of its membership and for the public good.

OUR VISION

By 2020 to be recognised publicly, by governments and amongst the angling community as the leading force for protecting and improving fish stocks and recreational angling in all its forms throughout the UK.

OUR VALUES

The Angling Trust will:

- Always act with integrity, respect and courtesy and for the greater good of angling and anglers, the water environment and the benefits of angling for society as a whole.
- Be forthright and determined on behalf of our membership.

- Be open and transparent to our members about our business operations.
- Listen and respond to the views of our membership.
- Deliver agreed programmes of work for those who fund us.
- Base all our campaigns on sound science and factual evidence.
- Ensure that the activities and policies of the Angling Trust and Fish Legal do not conflict with each other.
- Treat all our staff, volunteers and members fairly and equally.
- Make the best use of our resources to maximise delivery for minimum cost.
- Minimise our impact on the environment through use of sustainable materials and transport wherever possible.

Message from Our Chair

The Angling Trust is concerned with fish and fishing but ultimately all of our work is about people. Angling is one of the largest participant sports in the country, enjoyed by millions of people each year. Our member angling clubs have about 400,000 members. Each year our competitions attract thousands of participants and we work with tens of thousands of people of all ages and backgrounds to introduce them to the joys of angling. We employ more than 50 staff in the Angling Trust and thousands of volunteers give up their time to support the work that we do.

Angling is a highly accessible sport; people from as young as 3 to as old as 103 can take part. People with physical disabilities can fish alongside others on equal terms. Women can (and often do) catch more fish than men. Angling is a great leveller, and a way of bringing people from different backgrounds together.

Our Building Bridges programme with Eastern European anglers has demonstrated the potential for breaking down barriers between communities. We were only able to deliver this successfully by recruiting staff with the necessary languages and cultural understanding to communicate credibly.

In that context, it is vital that our organisation is accessible to all people, and that our programmes reflect their needs.

Angling is not representative of diversity in the general population. A significant majority of anglers are male, and participation amongst ethnic minority communities is low. As an optimist, I see this not as a challenge, but as an opportunity to recruit many more diverse people to our sport so that they can share in the great enjoyment and insight that angling offers. Only by opening up angling to new groups of people will we maintain it as a vibrant and popular activity.

If we are to do that, we must ensure that our work programmes, our competitions and our communications are relevant, appropriate and welcoming. The composition of our board and staff sends a strong signal to would-be anglers about the type of people who take part. The board and executive must understand the needs of the community it currently serves, but it also needs perspectives from the community it might serve. This requires it to have a wide range of perspectives to drive its decision-making.

We have made significant progress by recruiting 3 female non-executive directors to the board. We will continue to seek to recruit more diverse Directors, whenever opportunities arise to do so due to the retirement of existing directors. We will look at the way we advertise for co-opted roles on the board to reach the widest possible range of candidates willing to volunteer to serve.

This is not without its challenges; as a predominantly white, male sport, the type of people who put themselves forward to be directors are predominantly white and male. Change will take time and will require a commitment from everyone involved.

On behalf of the Board of the Angling Trust, I am making that commitment, not because of the new governance code from Sport England, but because I believe that it is vital for the success of the Angling Trust and for angling to have a bright, vibrant and sustainable future.
